UNWANTED LIFE

ABOUT ME

First, let us start with my blogs name. I choose it because I know it appears pessimistic, and to a large extent it's born from a gloomy place, but for my entire life I've felt unwanted, and many people struggling with mental feel the same way. Thus, I wanted them to know they weren't alone and that they are 'wanted'.

I have an undergraduate degree in Psychology with Counselling (BSc) and a postgraduate degree in Addiction Psychology and Counselling (MSc). I've also worked on the frontline in the field of addiction and mental health for many years. I started my mental health and invisible disability blog to help raise awareness and to help other people at the same time by providing them useful information and advice.

As a person I'm of mixed ethnicity (Afro-Caribbean and white-British), and I love the alternative scene, by that I mean I'm into rock and metal music. I also have several mental health diagnoses, health problems, and I'm dyslexic, but you wouldn't know any of that by merely looking at me. Because of all this, my blog isn't just a mental health blog, because people can look healthy but still be struggling with unseen health problems, and I want to give a voice to all of those people too.

I love science, but more specifically, the social sciences, as I want to know what makes people do the things they do. I also want to know how I can help others avoid my fate by assisting them to change before it's too late so that they can live their best quality of life.
